DETAILED ACTION

Response to Amendment

1. Amendment B has been filed on April 22, 2003 as Paper No. 5. Claims 1, 3, 4, 6, 17, and 19-21 have been amended. The amendment is sufficient to overcome the claim objections set forth in section 3 of the last Office Action.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

2. The text of those sections of Title 35, U.S. Code not included in this action can be found in a prior Office action.

3. Claims 1, 3, 4, 6, 17, and 19-21 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Katoka et al. (JP 2-149481) in view of Tokumitsu et al. (JP 4-45819, with translation provided).

Katoka et al. disclose a ceramic body suitable for use as a filter, made by impregnating a woven base of organic fibers with ceramic slurry and firing the woven base to eliminate the organic material from the ceramic body (page 3). Katoka et al. also disclose it to be acceptable to laminate the woven base impregnated with ceramic feedstock (page 5), and to form it into various shapes. However, Katoka et al. do not disclose a ceramic structure comprising connecting yarns that connect the layers of fabric together. Tokumitsu et al. teach a three-dimensional air-cleaning filter comprising first and second knitted layers held together by connecting yarns (Abstract and Figures 6 and 7). Tokumitsu et al. teach that this structure reduces pressure drop in use and it also allows and adsorbent to be placed between the layers. It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art to form the ceramic body of Katoka et al. so that it comprised first and second layers held together by connecting yarns as taught by Tokumitsu et al., in order to produce a filter that is low in pressure drop against laminar and turbulent flow and can hold adsorbent material between the layers. The presence of the connecting yarns would set the layers at a certain distance apart from one another. With regard to claims 3 and 19, it would be obvious to provide additional layers of ceramic fabric between the inner and outer faces in order to create better filtration, since Katoka et al. disclose laminating multiple fabrics to one another. With regard to claims 4, 6, 20, and 21, Katoka et al. disclose the material to be useful as a catalyst support (page 2).

Response to Arguments

4. Applicant's arguments filed in Paper No. 5 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.
5. In response to applicant's argument that there is no suggestion to combine the references, the examiner recognizes that obviousness can only be established by combining or modifying the teachings of the prior art to produce the claimed invention where there is some teaching, suggestion, or motivation to do so found either in the references themselves or in the knowledge generally available to one of ordinary skill in the art. See In re Fine, 837 F.2d 1071, 5 USPQ2d 1596 (Fed. Cir. 1988) and In re Jones, 958 F.2d 347, 21 USPQ2d 1941 (Fed. Cir. 1992). In this case, both references are directed to filters that support a catalyst, where the catalyst acts as the filtering material. Both references also use textile substrates to support the catalyst. Tokumitsu et al. use the textile to support an absorption agent, such as activated carbon and Katoka et al. use the textile to support a ceramic slurry which also acts to filter out undesirable material. Although Tokumitsu et al. do not disclose depositing ceramic slurry onto their textile, this reference was not used to show this feature in the rejection. Katoka et al. was used to show the teaching of depositing ceramic slurry onto a textile and then baking the material to remove the yarns. Tokumitsu et al. was used to show that a textile arrangement having two layers joined together by connecting yarns is known in the art, and would be obvious to use as the base textile material in Katoka et al. in order to provide the advantages set forth above in the rejection. Katoka et al. suggest the possibility of using a multi-layer woven base before impregnating with ceramic slurry (page 5), so using the teaching of Tokumitsu et al. of a multi-layer woven base with connecting yarns is an obvious modification to provide more area to hold more absorbent material (ceramic slurry in Katoka et al. and active carbon in Tokumitsu et al.).

Conclusion

6. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within

Art Unit: 1771

TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
